PEKING — West German entrepreneur Hans Joachim Suidenschnur said he hopes to conclude a deal next month to sell American transport and training planes to Communist China. He denied the negotiations involved the sale of arms. He said he did not care if the United States sought to curb him by blacklisting one of the Swiss firms he represents: "We are not interested in selling the aircraft which we have back to the United States." Among the items he is offering: an $80 million chemical plant to be made by a German consortium, advanced German speedboats, heavy duty trucks, electronic equipment for mineral exploration and a World War II B-26 bomber converted into an executive aircraft.
